

The Future is Plastic (Bags)

Talk about a partnership. Michigan-based Plascon and Grand Traverse Industries first began conversations in 2001 about how Plascon's bag-making program in prisons might be replicated to create jobs for people with disabilities. Fast forward a handful of years, and the two organizations are partnering in almost every way imaginable. GTI is manufacturing bags using Plascon's machines, creating revenue for both companies. Both Plascon and GTI provide technical assistance to each other's customers, and GTI staffers work at Plascon when customer demand runs particularly high. GTI also handles all custodials services at Plascon's facility. It's a creative relationship that only an organization as flexible as Grand Traverse Industries could facilitate and grow.

When asked about GTI's service, Plascon COO Jennifer McKinney says, "They provide an excellent product, have excellent quality control, and are extremely responsive and timely. I absolutely recommend GTI."
